

Anna Faustmann has joined the Department for Migration and Globalisation at Danube University Krems in 2009. She is a sociologist, specialising on health and social policy with a strong quantitative and qualitative empirical research base. Ms. Faustmann carries out research in the field of migration and labour market, social security, health systems and international comparison of welfare states. Ms. Faustmann is responsible for the development of the university course 'Migration and health'. Ms. Faustmann holds a Master degree in Sociology and is doing her PhD in Social Sciences and Economics at the University of Graz.